Trinity University’s International Studies Program and Center for International Engagement present the Spring 2016 International Studies Colloquium

Issues in the Contemporary Muslim World and their historical backgrounds

UNESCO has declared 2016 the International Year of Global Understanding. We need that understanding now, more than ever, as opposing sects clash in the Middle East, ISIS seeks to establish a caliphate and instigates global terrorist acts, and masses of people risk their lives to escape the ravages of civil war.

To what extent do these events affect U.S. and international security? How is religion used to justify political ends? Have the majority of the world’s Muslims been unfairly stigmatized? How are all faiths equally endangered by intolerance?

Join us for an ongoing discussion of these and other questions.
